The Importance of Monitoring

“Peace of mind” can mean different things to different people—but for most it’s a freedom from worry.

- It’s a good feeling to know that your family and home are protected while you’re away—or while you’re asleep.
- It’s reassuring to take off on a vacation knowing that someone is looking out for you 24/7 and will immediately contact you if something goes wrong.
- For a business owner, it’s having an extra set of eyes and ears protecting employees and keeping watch over valuable assets.

You Feel Secure

- A basic security system starts with door protection, a motion detector, yard signs plus stickers for your doors and windows—all of these elements work together to defend against an intruder.
- An interior siren will alert you to possible danger while the system automatically notifies one of our three UL Listed 24-hour monitoring centers. You can rest assured that help will be sent when you need it most.
- There are many new security products on the market today that can make your life safer and more convenient—ask us for complete details!

Our Networked Monitoring Centers Deliver Dependable Service

- All three of our monitoring centers are UL Listed for burglary and fire protective signaling. These centers are located across the United States but networked together to quickly route alarm traffic during adverse conditions—like bad weather. This allows us to balance calls so each of our three centers can operate at its full potential, providing you with reliable, quick and accurate response to your alarms—no matter what nature throws at us.
- We have implemented sophisticated security monitoring that delivers dependable service to our customers—with help from leading technology innovators, including UTC, AT&T®, Verizon®, Honeywell® and others.
- Our monitoring center operators receive several levels of training, with testing and certification at each level before they respond to live signals. Every operator must also pass extensive background tests and drug screenings before they can begin training. To ensure quality customer service, our Excellence Assurance program provides operators with continuous training and feedback throughout their careers.
